ABOUT THE AUTHOR

I have been making music with computers and synthesizers when I laid my hands on magazines, Keyboard Magazine (not anymore in print), Sound on Sound, and Computer Music (not anymore in print – replaced by musicradar.com).

Since 1992, I started with connecting two keyboards via MIDI cables, and using one keyboard's on-board sequencer as my music making tool.

A friend introduced me to software, in the 1990's, there was Cubasis, Cakewalk, and plenty of affordable music making software. I have not looked back.

The idea of writing a book or a guide to help others make music occurred to me years ago.

My goal is to help others, from all ages, backgrounds, to discover the fun of making music as a hobby, assisted by the surprising affordable tools to make this happen.

Let us have fun and make music.
