ABOUT THE AUTHOR

I have been making music with computers when I laid my hands on international magazines, Keyboard Magazine, Sound on Sound, and Computer Music.

Since 1992, I started with connecting two keyboards via MIDI cables, and using one keyboard's on-board sequencer as my music making tool.

A friend introduced me to software, in the 1990's, there was Cubasis, Cakewalk, and plenty of affordable music making software. I have not looked back.

The idea of writing a book or a guide to help others make music occurred me years ago, around the year 2000. I started playing around with this draft, adding some ideas, making lots of research from other professional musicians who are also writers, and the inspiration started.

My goal is to help others, from all ages, backgrounds, to discover the fun of making music as a hobby, assisted by the surprising affordable tools to make this happen.

Let us have fun and make music.
